ALBERTA MOTION PICTURE DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION
1984 ANNUAL REPORT

Fiscal 1983/84, the first full year of operation, was significant for the Alberta Motion Picture Development Corporation in terms of film and video production development activities and experience gained in fulfilling our mandate.

Originally, the Government of Alberta earmarked $3 million to the Alberta Motion Picture Development Corporation for the purpose of making loans for development. Interest accrued on this principle is $1,081,198.00. At March 31st, 1984, 25 projects had been approved for loan commitments totalling $1,189,546.00. Of this sum, the following has been allocated as follows: $829,783.00 for development of feature movies (theatrical and television movies); $251,500.00 for television series; and $108,263.00 for documentaries or shorts. Two productions, one a television movie "DRAW", starring Kirk Douglas and James Coburn, and a television pilot "GRIZZLIES OF HANNINGTON - THE GREAT DIVIDE" have completed production. Production budgets on all projects when produced will total approximately $75 million. It is anticipated that four more projects will go into production by the end of 1984.

1. Strengthen the quality of Canadian production;

BOARD APPOINTMENTS

New Board members effective May, 1984, are: Carrie Hunter, Director of the Banff Television Festival; Rex Little, Chartered Accountant for Campbell Associates of Lethbridge; and Terry Coles, President of CFCN Television in Calgary. They join Board members Orville Kope, Chairman of the Board and Senior Vice-President of Corporate Affairs for The Monarch Group; Helen Hammond, Corporate Partner of Foster Research and Secretary-Treasurer of the Board; and Thomas Peacocke, Actor and Drama Professor at the University of Alberta. Former Board members Ken Chapman and Aristides Gazetas tenures expired in March, 1984.

ADVISORY COMMITTEE

The members of the AMPDC Advisory Committee represent years of experience and expertise in the Alberta film and video industry. They are Eda Lishman, film producer and chairman of the Committee; Nick Bakyta, film producer; Doug Hutton, television producer; Anne Wheeler, film producer and director; and Peter White, film and television writer.

KEEPING PACE WITH INDUSTRY DEVELOPMENT

The Canadian film and video industry is in the throes of an extensive restructuring. Recommendations made originally in the Federal Applebaum/Hebert Report are reiterated and defined in the recently released National Film and Video Policy presented by Francis Fox, Federal Minister of Communications. These recommendations have affected the key players in the Canadian film and video industry, including the National Film Board, Telefilm Canada (formerly the Canadian Film Development Corporation), the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and other television networks and broadcasters, and the many independent producers, distributors and film exhibitors throughout Canada. There is agreement amongst these organizations, including the AMPDC, of the strategies involved in obtaining the long term objectives of the Canadian film and video industry. They include the following:

1. Strengthen the quality of Canadian productions;

2. Increased support for promotion and marketing of Canadian product, both domestically and internationally;
3. Greater access to screens, including Canadian productions to Canadian audiences;
4. Increased access to the American market with a greater proportion of profits going to Canadians.

Identifying and dealing with these complexities has resulted in a new spirit of co-operation between traditionally diverse factions within the industry. This joining of forces has increased the effectiveness of these individual entities and promises a considerable degree of success in meeting today's challenges.

No comparable government funded agency with the AMPDC mandate and regulations exists to look to for precedent. Script development, investment and marketing agencies have been established, but none are as broad with respect to what is defined as development. Striking a balance between the vast number of applications and the funds available has been (and continues to be) a very awesome task. Added to that is the obvious difficulty in evaluating projects for commercial viability, producers' capabilities and potential for financing, and benefits to the industry in Alberta. Fortunately, everyone associated with the Corporation accepts that responsibility with vigor and diligence.

MARKETING

To effectively utilize the $3 million Motion Picture Development Fund, the exigencies of marketing Alberta motion pictures must be addressed. Motion picture marketing in Alberta, indeed throughout Canada, has been historically difficult for numerous reasons, many beyond individual producers' control. It is further exacerbated by the current, highly volatile climate worldwide for film and television production, brought about by economic conditions, costs of production, pay television, state-of-the-art production and transmission technology and vastly fluctuating audience tastes and habits.

FINANCING

Closely linked to marketing demands is the difficulty of raising production financing. Developments in this area have been dramatic over the past few years. Prior to 1981, Canadian motion picture producers enjoyed the benefits of a large pool of investor capital resulting from generous income tax incentives. However, beginning in 1980 and continuing to date, this source of capital has virtually disappeared due to changes in the Income Tax Act, economic recession and the generally poor earnings record of feature films. Motion picture production consequently dropped drastically in 1981 and is only now reviving as a result, in part, of pay television's requirements to broadcast and finance independent Canadian film productions and the creation by the Government of Canada in early 1983 of the $250 million Canadian Broadcast Fund for television programming. In spite of the latter two developments, financing of motion pictures is still very difficult and new approaches are constantly required.

STRATEGIES

To assist the motion picture industry in Alberta, the Corporation has developed a marketing/financing program which is currently being implemented and includes, as funds permit, the following:

1. A general promotional publication describing projects in development, the AMPDC, the industry in Alberta and a pitch for co-productions, financing, pre-sales, etc;
2. A personnel contact campaign in the industry, particularly at major marketplaces by Corporation staff;
3. Extensive meetings with Alberta and Canadian broadcasters to encourage licensing of Alberta projects for purposes of accessing the new Telefilm Canada Broadcast Fund;

4. Publicity campaign through trade publication advertisements to raise the consciousness of the international industry to Alberta's potential for productions, co-productions and investment;
5. Developing a program of linking client/producers, where appropriate, with distributors for early consultation on financing and marketing strategies;
6. Commencing a campaign amongst the traditional financial community; brokers, investment counsellors, etc., to bring them back into film investment.

Naturally, the financing and marketing of film and television product rests with the producer--all we can do is help. We are committed to that and trust that those endeavours will prove fruitful.

THE FUTURE

Even with the many variables inherent in the film and video production industry, the future holds much promise. The demand for quality programming continues to increase. The appetites of the new transmission technologies are insatiable. The industry, worldwide, is in transition. New giants are emerging as old ones disappear. The film and video production industry is an integral part of the new information explosion and it is here to stay. The experience gained by the AMPDC this past year has allowed Alberta producers to take advantage of the many opportunities which present themselves, almost daily, and move ever closer to the realization of the ultimate goal... an indigenous Alberta film and television industry.
